Subject: RIN 1210-AB32

To Whom It May Concern:

I understand there is a potential rule change in the above subject rule. It is also my understanding that the rule would prevent or at least greatly restrict the ability to trade options in a retirement account. I would like to voice my opinion and objection to this rule.

I have spent years learning the proper ins and outs and complexity required to trade options and am now using them to very much protect my retirement accounts and have been using techniques involving options to continually grow my retirement accounts. Having learned to use these techniques as a form of insurance against my portfolio, you will be putting my retirement at a much increased risk if you implement such a policy.

Please do not change the current regulations regarding trading options in IRAs. They offer a much safer approach to investing than just using standard stock buys and sells.

Sincerely,

GF Anderson, III
